

Balancing Risk and Protection

We can “tip the scale” toward a more positive life outcome for your child if we focus on the “positives” in the environment, family, and within the child that protect your child from stress, misfortune and risk. Record some risks your child has faced on the left side of the scale and some things that protect your child on the right.

