Promote the Resilience and Social and Emotional Health of TODDLERS

Activity Title: Puppet Talk

Purpose of Activity:
Acting out scenes that are either make-believe or loosely based on children’s own lives helps them to work through the beginnings of conflict-resolution, or simply stated, they start to understand the problem-solving process. Children use behaviors for a reason. Adults who are observing children closely in dramatic play may begin to see these roots of behavior played out in the stories children tell. Pay close attention to begin to help your child on the way to becoming a life-long problem solver!

Materials:
Any materials to make puppets – brown paper bags, old socks, paper plates, craft sticks, crayons, markers, old magazines, tape

Steps:
1. Using the materials you have available, make a puppet with your child. If you are using a paper plate or a brown paper bag, use crayons and markers to make various facial features. You can also look through magazines and cut out faces or other pictures.
2. Make many different puppets with your child over time, until you have a nice collection so the puppets can interact.
3. Tape a paper plate puppet to a craft stick. Put your hand inside the brown paper bag or sock.
4. If puppet play is new to your child, you might first use puppets to make up a story of your own. During your story, be sure to talk about your feelings, behaviors and actions.
5. As you act our stories, enjoy your child’s reactions. Make the puppets give him kisses and hugs.
6. Set loving limits. “Please touch the puppets gently. We took our time to make them look so special!”
7. Tell your child about his reactions. “You are afraid of the fish!” “You really like getting high-fives from the Elmo puppet.”
8. As your child gets a little older and gains confidence in his puppet play, you can make the stories more meaningful by talking about problem solving between the characters. “How do you think these two puppets can solve this problem?” Getting your child started in brainstorming solutions will help when real behavioral concerns arise that must be addressed and worked through.
9. Help your child use his homemade puppets to put on a show based on the stories he tells you.

Copyright © 2020 The Devereux Foundation. Activity adapted from “Socially Strong, Emotionally Secure: 50 Activities to Promote Resilience in Young Children.” Permission to reproduce granted for educational purposes by the Devereux Center for Resilient Children.